

The main activity was the continued success of the "Help! I'm an Accidental Government Information Librarian" webinar series. After taking a break in July, the series resumed on August 13 with part one of a three part series on the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The "Help!" webinar series will continue with parts two and three on the Bureau of Labor Statistics scheduled for October 22 and November 19 respectively. An additional webinar on data and statistics for researching education is slated for December 3, and one on the federal budget for December 11.

We plan to administer a survey in November to current members and to North Carolina depository/government information librarians who are not currently in NCLA or GRS. This will allow us to find out what current and prospective members would like the section to offer, and thus hopefully yield ways we can increase both membership and participation.
