

INFORM

The North Carolina Library Association (NCLA) strives to inform members of legislation which affects libraries and library personnel, with opportunities for involvement at federal and state levels.

Members are also informed through learning opportunities such as the Leadership Institute, an intensive leadership training opportunity for librarians who have 3-15 years of experience.

CONNECT

NCLA provides opportunities for continuing education for all library personnel through workshops, programs, and through the biennial conference.

Sections and Round Tables, many of which host networking events, provide further opportunities for members to connect.

NCLA publishes North Carolina Libraries Online, an award-winning journal devoted to discussion of library issues.

SUPPORT

NCLA supports its members through various awards for outstanding contributors to librarianship.

The NCLA Endowment enables the organization to award scholarships to library school students as well as to provide speakers at conferences and continuing education opportunities.

MEMBER BENEFITS

- ☑ Interaction among advocates interested in quality library service
